Sunday January 27, 2017 4:00pm

Cast: Kelly Macdonald, David Denman, Irrfan Khan

Directed By: Marc Turtletaub

Genre: Drama

Rating: R (for language)

Runtime: 103 minute

Language: English

Marc Turtletaub's English-language adaptation of Natalia Smirnoff's The Puzzle - written by Oren Moverman - tells the story of under-appreciated mum Agnes (Kelly Macdonald), whose life revolves around her husband Louie (David Denman) and her two sons Ziggy (Bubba Weiler) and Gabe (Austin Abrams), who are on the brink of flying the nest. When Agnes receives a jigsaw for her birthday it opens a surprising new avenue in her life that leads her to meet Robert (Irrfan Khan), an avid competitive puzzler who triggers a reassessment of her situation.

Turtletaub's film is a subtle character study that allows Agnes to retain her essential quiet character traits even as her outlook on life and her expectations from her marriage begin to evolve. She has the complexity of a 1000-piecer but even she doesn't realise that at first, her dawning realisation of what she wants proving more difficult to put together than the puzzles she loves so much.

Directed By: Christian Petzold

Rating: PG

Genre: Drama

Runtime: 101 minutes

A young man fleeing the camps in Nazi Germany finds himself in possession of papers that will allow him to go to Mexico. All he needs is to impersonate the dead man. His efforts take him to Marseille where he meets the man's wife and a convoluted tale unfolds. Intense and engaging, we are hooked from the beginning. Excellent acting. The director weaves his old war-time story with modern cars and buildings in a subtle expression of how the past overlays the present.
